Profiting Through Churches:

All churches have a common need and that is funding to assure their long-term sustainability.

It is not uncommon that many churches “factor out the plate.”

This means that they know from month to month or season to season, if a resort community church, how much the collection yields and they have a recorded financial history to support it.

Well, just as businesses pledge their future account receivables as collateral to obtain financing, so are churches forced to do the same.

Unfortunately, the factoring rate may be as high as 12%.

But with what you learn at New York Trust University, you will be able to wean churches off this sanctioned loan-sharking by setting up a Charitable Trust program within their church.

The church members will readily see that what you offer is the single most effective estate planning, allowed by IRS law, that will sustain their church and benefit their families in an even greater fashion.

Setting up a Charitable Trust program in a single church may earn you $150,000 annually.
